CITY CEMETERY. he Resting Place of the Bend Given Over to the Raids of Swine. The fence on the south side of the City Cemetery, constituting the dividing line between that place and the depot of the Nashville and Decatur railroad, having been entirely or partially destroyed, hogs and cows have easy access to the sacred City of the Dead, and are not slow to avail emselves of the circumstance, It cannot, therefore, be a matter of surprise that made graves made a prey to the rooting propensities of filthy swine. The attention of the men claiming to be the city authorities has been repeatedly called to the fact, but they do not seem inclined to abate the abase complained of. If the Mayor, or the City Conncil, or the Cemetery Committee, or somebody else having the necessary authority and a decent regard for the feelings of the living and the memory of the dead, would order the immediate rebuilding of the fence, the trouble and money so expended would redound much more to their credit than if thrown away in getting up poisterous political processions and noisy ovations to Radical demagogues and pothouse brawlers; would be much more creditable to their sense of propriety and notel bills made by a herd of self-conceited of the city in their own precious keeping. There was decided improvement in the attendance last night at the theater, and the audience were very agreeably entertained. The more we see of the new company, the better are we pleased. Three pieces were presented last night, and the full strength of the company brought out, thus affording those present an oportunity of judging of the merits of those who took part in farce, comedy and drama.

In two of the pieces, Miss Nellie Ger mon was caste, and acquitted herself with great credit, her songs in particular, being loudly encored. Mr. Johnson appeared in the same pieces, and was equally successful in his rendition of the characters, while Hamilton, Cooper, Morrison, Miss Mary $2,051,42 4,943,21 Thompson and Miss Lizzie Cooper, rendered able support.

On this evening will be presented the last great London and New York sensation, a dramatization in five acts of the celebrated novel entitled "Foul Play," a piece which has caused no little excitement on the stage, and inasmuch as it is the farewell benefit of Miss Germon, we hope to see the theater filled to its utmost capacity.
